

"SCRUFFY" Duffy, "Bruiser" Harris and "Professor" Jenkins, three British privates had all been experts with explosives before the war. Despite their horrible military records their expertise was being used on special missions. When a long range German gun began shelling their part of the front line, it was only a matter of time before they were called in.

Somewhere in this area, is the long range gun which is making a mess of our tactical plans! We've worked out its approximate position but the gun has never been seen, even by our aircraft which have been sent over to find it. That probably means it's under cover in one of these hills and goes back into hiding immediately after each firing. So here's what we're going to do about it...