

A period of reflection and honouring the fallen.

Quaich safely delivered. You were correct about Sir Tallyman trying to stop you.

Me acting as the decoy gave you and the others a trouble free run.

An entry from the Book of Days. See issue 81 for further entries. Editor.

On the 15th August, 1879, a meteor survived falling through the Earth's atmosphere and landed in common ground just to the north of Yorkton, gouging a large track as it rolled. It's run was eventually halted by an oak tree, which the meteor spilt in half. The tree rather than dying, continued to grow and sprouts leaves each year.

